

Career Design Map

One page. One decision. A clear direction built on what you are actually built for.

Find Your Best Job — A 7-Profile Career Assessment

How to Use This Map

This is the output document for the entire course. It has two parts: a backward look and a forward one. Complete it after you have your assessment scores and have worked through the application sections.

Part 1 asks you to look at your career history honestly — does the evidence of your past line up with what your profile says about you?

Part 2 asks you to write one concrete next step with a timeframe and a measure. Not a plan. A decision. Be specific. Vague answers produce vague results.

What This Map Is Not

- A five-year career plan.
- A personality test result you carry around forever.
- An excuse to quit your job tomorrow.
- A guarantee that a different role will fix everything.

What This Map Is

- A snapshot of where you are right now — honest about the gap between fit and reality.
- A written commitment to one concrete action in the next 90 days.
- A reference point to return to when work feels unclear or wrong again.

The goal is not a five-year plan. One concrete, specific decision — written down, with a timeframe and a measure. One thing, done consistently, changes the trajectory more than most people expect until they try it.

Part 1 — Looking Back

Check whether the evidence of your career history lines up with your assessment results.

My Assessment Results

Dominant Profile (highest score):

Secondary Profile (2nd highest):

Supporting Profile (3rd highest):

Career History — Pattern Check

List significant roles. Note how each felt daily and how well it engaged your dominant profile (1–5).

Role / Context	How it felt to show up daily	Profile fit? (1–5)

What Pattern Do You See?

Do the roles that engaged your profile correlate with the ones that felt meaningful?

Part 2 — Looking Forward

Based on your profiles and what you have learned, write one concrete next step. Not a plan — a decision.

Where I Am Now
Briefly describe your current work situation and whether your dominant profile is engaged.

The Gap

How large is the gap between your current role and what your profile says you are built for?

Small	Some adjustment needed — task shaping and conversations
Medium	Meaningful change needed — role shift or significant reshaping
Large	Significant direction change — new field, function, or career path

My One Next Step
One concrete action I will take in the next 90 days:

I will complete this by:	I will know I did it when:
--------------------------	----------------------------

What Might Stop Me — And How I Will Respond

90-Day Review Prompt
Did you do the one thing? If yes — write the next one. If not — write honestly about what stopped you. Both answers are useful.