

Career Match Guide

Best-fit roles for each of the 7 motivational gift profiles

Find Your Best Job — A 7-Profile Career Assessment

How to Use This Guide

Complete the Natural Gifts Assessment first. Then go straight to your dominant profile. Read the summary, review the job list, and note the roles to approach with caution. Your secondary profiles are worth reading too — they add nuance.

These matches are starting points, not an exhaustive list. If your specific role is not listed, use the profile summary to ask: does this role primarily demand what my profile naturally gives? That question will take you further than any list.

Profile Index

01	The Kind Friend	Gift of Compassion (Mercy)
02	The Reliable Helper	Gift of Service
03	The Clear Thinker	Gift of Teaching
04	The Organized Boss	Gift of Administration
05	The Generous Planner	Gift of Giving
06	The Honest Speaker	Gift of Prophecy
07	The Positive Supporter	Gift of Exhortation

At a Glance

You are motivated by genuine care for people in pain or need. You feel what others feel before they say a word and you respond with warmth, not obligation. Your best work happens when the human cost of a situation is what matters most.

Best-Fit Roles

1	Counsellor / Psychotherapist	Sitting with people at their lowest. This is where you feel most useful.
2	Nurse / Patient Care Specialist	Excellent nursing requires genuine human attentiveness beyond clinical skill.
3	Social Worker	Supporting families through crisis requires someone who stays present without hardening.
4	Chaplain / Pastoral Carer	Being present at the hardest moments of people's lives — natural for this profile.
5	Community Development Worker	Long-term work with vulnerable communities where relationship is the foundation.
6	Humanitarian / Aid Worker	Field-level care in organisations responding to crisis and need.
7	Occupational Therapist	Helping people restore function and dignity after illness or injury.

Approach with Caution

High-conflict environments that ignore human impact · Roles requiring purely transactional decisions about people
· Environments with no genuine relationship or collaboration

Workplace Tip

Protect your emotional energy deliberately. Set clear limits on how much you carry for others. Your gift is most useful when it comes from a full place, not a depleted one.

At a Glance

You are motivated by meeting practical, immediate needs — and you move without being asked. You show care through what you do, not what you say. Your best work happens when the outcome directly and visibly benefits a real person.

Best-Fit Roles

1	Nurse / Healthcare Support	Attentiveness to practical needs and genuine follow-through.
2	Operations Manager	Keeping systems running, managing details, ensuring reliable output.
3	Executive Assistant / Office Mgr	Supporting a leader by handling what would otherwise slow them down.
4	Event Planner / Coordinator	Every detail covered, every person has what they need.
5	Chef / Catering Manager	Hands-on, output-focused work with a clear, visible result.
6	Logistics Coordinator	Practical, detail-focused work — when it works, everything flows.
7	Teaching Assistant	Notices which student is struggling and helps before being asked.

Approach with Caution

Abstract roles with no visible human benefit · Senior leadership without a strong support structure around you · Environments that routinely take your contribution for granted

Workplace Tip

You need to hear that your work matters. Create feedback loops that confirm the need was met. Practise saying no before you are already overextended.

At a Glance

You are motivated by accuracy, depth, and getting things right at the foundation. You build understanding layer by layer and do not move forward until the base is solid. Your best work happens where being thorough is valued, not rushed past.

Best-Fit Roles

1	Researcher / Academic	Deep, methodical, source-checked work. You find this energising, not dry.
2	Technical Writer / Non-fiction	Communicating complex information accurately and clearly.
3	Data Analyst / Scientist	Working with information to find what is actually true.
4	Curriculum Designer	How knowledge is structured and sequenced matters to you deeply.
5	Lawyer / Legal Analyst	Reading legislation carefully, applying it precisely — feels like fluency.
6	Compliance Officer / Auditor	Ensuring standards are met and problems are surfaced, not buried.
7	Software Engineer	Logical precision required to build reliable, well-structured systems.

Approach with Caution

Fast-paced environments that reward speed over accuracy · Roles where likeability matters more than being correct · Environments that penalise thoroughness as overthinking

Workplace Tip

Protect time for depth. Communicate your bottom line first, then the reasoning. Not everyone needs the foundation before the conclusion — learn to lead with the answer.

At a Glance

You are motivated by vision, goals, and the organised movement of people and resources toward an outcome. You see the end state before work begins and build backward from it. Your best work happens with real authority, real accountability, and a goal worth pursuing.

Best-Fit Roles

1	Manager / Operations Director	Responsible for outcomes through other people — this is what you are built for.
2	Project Manager	Clear scope, timeline, deliverable. You keep things on track through focus.
3	CEO / Founder	Setting direction, building the team, driving toward the outcome.
4	Military / Emergency Officer	High-pressure environments requiring fast decisions and clear authority.
5	Senior Public Administrator	Real decision-making power with visible outcomes.
6	Department Head (any sector)	You thrive when you own the outcome, not just the title.
7	Engineering Manager / Tech Lead	Stepping back from the technical work to think about team and delivery.

Approach with Caution

Permanent support roles, especially under a weak or indecisive leader · Environments with no clear goals or outcomes to aim at · Roles where authority exists but accountability does not

Workplace Tip

Watch the relational cost. Your focus on outcomes is a genuine strength — but under pressure it can make people feel like instruments. Growth for you is learning to develop others, not just direct them.

At a Glance

You are motivated by the strategic use of resources — money, time, connections, opportunity. You think in impact. You give willingly but wisely. Your best work happens when you have genuine control over resources and a clear sense of the outcome that produces.

Best-Fit Roles

1	Financial Advisor / Investment	Natural intelligence around money and value — you think where resources should go.
2	Entrepreneur / Business Owner	You see the gap, have the resourcefulness, and the discipline to build.
3	Non-profit / Charity Director	Financial shrewdness combined with genuine desire to help others.
4	Social Entrepreneur	Building businesses with explicit social benefit — both drives at full strength.
5	Procurement / Supply Chain	Getting the best value from every transaction. You find this satisfying.
6	Grant Manager / Philanthropist	Directing significant resources toward genuine need with wisdom.
7	Business Development Manager	Finding opportunity, allocating resource toward it, building toward larger outcomes.

Approach with Caution

Roles with no autonomy over resources or decisions · Environments that reward visibility over impact · Situations requiring you to give without discernment

Workplace Tip

Develop discernment alongside generosity. Not every apparent need is genuine. Your resourcefulness is most valuable when guided by wisdom, not just willingness.

At a Glance

You are motivated by truth, values, and accountability. You notice when something is wrong and feel compelled to name it. Your best work happens in environments where truth-telling is not just acceptable — it is the job.

Best-Fit Roles

1	Lawyer / Litigator	Building a case, arguing it without flinching — directness and conviction are assets.
2	Compliance Officer / Auditor	Finding what is wrong and holding it to a standard. You find this necessary.
3	Investigative Journalist	Exposing what is hidden, verifying claims, publishing truth regardless of inconvenience.
4	Social Activist / Advocate	Naming injustice clearly and pushing back against failing systems.
5	Counsellor (Direct Approach)	You name the pattern and point clearly toward what needs to change.
6	Policy Analyst	Identifying gaps between what is and what should be — making the case for change.
7	Quality Assurance Manager	Ensuring standards are met and problems are surfaced, not buried.

Approach with Caution

Image management roles built around messaging over accuracy · Cultures that actively punish or penalise directness · Environments where truth is routinely adjusted for political reasons

Workplace Tip

Your truth is real. The growth edge is learning to deliver it in a way that opens conversations rather than closing them. Not softening the truth — making sure it lands.

At a Glance

You are motivated by human potential and the specific drive to help people move forward. You think in steps, in next moves, in visible progress. Your best work happens when you are close to the people you are helping.

Best-Fit Roles

1	Coach (Executive / Career)	Helping someone identify where they are stuck and move forward. Built for this.
2	HR / People Development Lead	When your job is literally to help people do better, you thrive.
3	Trainer / Facilitator	Running workshops. You make people feel capable, not evaluated.
4	Sales / Business Development	Consultative, relationship-based selling. Your belief in the offer comes through.
5	Pastoral / Community Worker	Direct, relationship-based people work where the outcome is growth and wellbeing.
6	Teacher / Lecturer	Particularly in applied settings where practical progress is the measure.
7	Developer Relations / Tech Ed	Helping a community learn and grow — where encouragement is the method.

Approach with Caution

Solo roles with minimal human contact · Purely transactional environments with no investment in people · Long periods of isolated, heads-down output work

Workplace Tip

Learn to distinguish genuine support from enabling. Some people will use your encouragement to stay comfortable in a place they need to leave. Recognising that difference and holding the line is one of the harder things this profile faces.
